

ABSTRACT

A computer-implemented system and process for the purpose of dispute resolution and management. The invention provides a system and method particularly adapted for tracking and mediating disputes, such as multiparty lawsuits, including both simultaneous and asynchronous submission of offers and demands in the mediation/negotiation context thus eliminating many of the inefficiencies inherent in traditional mediation processes.